

Perspectives of Croatia's Africa relations as impending member of the Eurozone

Kohnert, Dirk

Preprint / Preprint

Arbeitspapier / working paper

Empfohlene Zitierung / Suggested Citation:

Kohnert, D. (2022). Perspectives of Croatia's Africa relations as impending member of the Eurozone. <https://nbn-resolving.org/urn:nbn:de:0168-ssoar-81034-4>

Nutzungsbedingungen:

Dieser Text wird unter einer CC BY-NC-SA Lizenz (Namensnennung-Nicht-kommerziell-Weitergabe unter gleichen Bedingungen) zur Verfügung gestellt. Nähere Auskünfte zu den CC-Lizenzen finden Sie hier: <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/4.0/deed.de>

Terms of use:

This document is made available under a CC BY-NC-SA Licence (Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike). For more information see: <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/4.0>

Perspectives of Croatia's Africa relations as impending member of the Eurozone

Dirk Kohnert ¹

Tito's view on Africa, imperialism and the Wall Street

Source: Blazsetin, 2019 ²;

Abstract: In July 2020 the EU parliament voted in favour to Croatia's bid to become the newest member of the eurozone from 1 January 2023. It fulfilled all the criteria for adopting the euro, despite the backdrop of the COVID-19 pandemic, high inflation, and the impact of Russia's invasion of Ukraine. Croatia's accession to the euro will be the first significant positive step in the European integration process since Brexit. It may depict perspectives for further enlargement of the eurozone in the Balkans. The admission will also impact EU Africa relations. Alongside its close foreign relations with South Africa, Zagreb established diplomatic relations with South Sudan, Somalia, and the Central African Republic in 2020. Yet, regarding Croatia's long-established African relations it would be decisive to take account of the lessons learned from its multifaceted African relations history. Croatian explorers like Dragutin Lerman, mostly unknown outside their home country, had been active in exploring Sub-Saharan African countries in the early 20th century. During the Cold War, political and economic relations between Yugoslavia (including Croatia) and the African nonaligned countries improved significantly in the period between 1973 and 1981. Mutual economic cooperation between nonaligned countries was encouraged to fight 'underdevelopment' in Africa. Thus, within the framework of industrial cooperation, two Yugoslav-Ghanaian joint ventures were formed in 1971, for example for forest exploitation and wood processing and a joint factory for the production of motorcycles and pumps in Ghana. Moreover, Yugoslavia was the only non-African country which participated in the funding of the Liberation Committee of the Organisation of African Unity (OAU), although Zagreb preferred bilateral relations with individual liberation movements. Yet, during the process of transition, both Croatia and South Africa experienced difficulties with the illicit arms trade due to high levels of corruption within the judicial system and police. Also, the citizens of both countries lack of trust in the state's capacity to impose social control opened the way for organized crime to work with impunity. Criminal groups used patron-client relationships with the citizens of South Africa and Croatia, to build and sustain a level of popular legitimacy that the state was lacking.

Keywords: Croatia, Yugoslavia, Zagreb, Balkans, Balkan Studies, Western Balkans, Cold war, Non-aligned movement, EU, eurozone, Sub-Saharan Africa, OAU, economic development, informal sector, international trade, Ghana, South Africa, African Studies

JEL-Code: D31, D62, E26, F13, F22, F35, F54, N14, N17, N47, O15, O17, O19, O52, P27, Z13

¹ Dirk Kohnert, associated expert, GIGA-Institute for African Affairs, Hamburg. Draft : 18 August 2022

² Cartoon from the cover of the satirical Croatian magazine Kerempuh (Eulenspiegel), (Kerempuh, 1948, no. 158: 1). © (all rights reserved). Source: Blazsetin, 2019.

1. Introduction

On 5 July 2022, the European Parliament voted in favour of Croatia's entry into the Eurozone from 1 January 2023. This marked a further enlargement of the Eurozone in the Balkans and was the first significant step to promote European integration since the unfortunate backlash by Brexit (EP-news, 2022). Croatia fulfilled all criteria for adopting the euro. It had even a higher level of price convergence with the Eurozone compared to other member states on their adoption of the euro, although it had at the same time to cope with the backlash of the COVID-19 pandemic, high inflation, and Russia's war against Ukraine. Already in January 2020, Croatia had assumed the Presidency of the Council of the European Union. Moreover, the Freedom House's annual study of political rights and civil liberties worldwide rated Croatia as 'free' in 2022.

Zagreb had joined the EU already before on 1 July 2013, and NATO in 2009. Its largest export market was Italy, and more than 60 % of Croatia's exports went to the EU (Judah, 2013). It had the largest GDP per capita of the five countries in the Western Balkan. Yet, Croatia changed considerably since the beginning of the admission process. In 2013 its economy experienced a recession effectively for the fifth year with unemployment rising from 13.4% in 2008 to up to 20.4% in 2013. Its population was ageing and shrinking, from 4.7 million to less than 4.3 million, mainly because many Croatian Serbs had left the country in the 1990s (Judah, 2013).

Cartoon 2: 'Welcome Croatia!'

Perspectives on Croatia joining the EU in 2013 as 28th EU-member

Source: Fritz Behrendt, cvce.eu © (all rights reserved).

According to Croatian Prime Minister Andrej Plenković, Croatia should use its admission to the Eurozone also as an opportunity to improve Croatia-Africa economic relations. This would be an opportunity to join the efforts of both African governments and the EU to strengthen and stabilise African fragile states and - by crisis prevention and promoting good government - also prevent migration flows (Spasojević, 2018). Therefore, Zagreb established additional diplomatic relations with South Sudan, Somalia, and the Central African Republic in 2020 (Hina, 2020), apart from the close foreign relations with 35 Sub-Saharan states, already established before, notably with South Africa (see chapter 2 below for more details).

Croatia, as a major successor to the collapsed Yugoslavia, has long-established special ties with African countries, which Zagreb tries to honour as far as possible. Already during the Cold War Yugoslavia instituted significant political, cultural and economic relations with the newly independent African states. Moreover, it was the only non-African country which participated in the funding of the Liberation Committee of the Organisation of African Unity (OAU), although Zagreb preferred bilateral relations with individual liberation movements (Wikipedia, 2022³).

To promote development in African nonaligned countries in the period between 1973 and 1981 Belgrade relied mostly on encouraging mutual economic cooperation (Pustaj, 2016). One example was the industrial cooperation with Ghana and two Yugoslav-Ghanaian joint ventures, established in 1971. Thus, ŠIK from Kruševac participated in a joint venture for forest exploitation and wood processing (TTK-LTD), and Tomos from Koper, cooperated in the form of a joint factory for the production of motorcycles and pumps (TOMOS-GHANA LTD) (Pustaj, 2016).

However, the leaders of African independence in the 1960s and 1970s, like Kwame Nkrumah (Ghana), Léopold Sédar Senghor (Senegal), and Sékou Toure (Guinea), were sceptical vis à vis developments in the Balkans which was for them synonymous to intestine strife and ethnic as well as national disintegration, in short, 'Balkanisation', which became part of the phrasing of threats to modern African nationalism by African leaders (Neuberger, 1976).

Yet, the post-communist countries of the Western Balkan suffered from increasing poverty and high unemployment rates which impaired economic cooperation with SSA countries. Also, growing income inequality impacted the further progress of poverty in Croatia (Mansi & Hysa & Panait & Voica, 2020).

Graph 1: Income inequality in Croatia, compared with other European countries (2009-2018, Gini coefficient)

Source: Mansi, et. al., 2020

³ Source: Yugoslavia and the Organisation of African Unity. Wikipedia

2. Croatia's foreign political relations with SSA

Croatia can look back on a wealth of experience from the history of its relations with Africa. Yugoslavian explorers and travellers, mostly unknown outside their home countries, had been active in Africa. These include Slovenian catholic missionaries, the most famous among them was Ignacij Knoblehar (1819-1858), a Slovene Roman Catholic missionary in Eastern North Africa, who was very active in Sudan, as well as two of his countrymen who proselytised in the German African colonies. Moreover, Dragutin Lerman (1883-1919) an administrator of the so-called Congo Free State (État indépendant du Congo, in French), was a Croat. Croats, too, were the brothers Seljan who contributed to the expansion of the territory of the Ethiopian king Menelik II (1844-1913) (Smitek, & Lazarevic & Petrovic 1993).

On the other hand, French colonial administrators were quite impressed by the Austrian administration of the Balkans, the Austro-Hungarian Empire, and its organization of military frontiers in Austrian frontier regiments during the 19th century, including Croatia. They considered applying a similar system to organize French colonies in Africa, thereby employing the same racist, biased, cut-and-dried sentiments they held of the Croats to impose it on Africans in their colonies ⁴ (Emerit, 1959; Blanc, 1951). Thus, Thomas Robert Bugeaud, (1784 –1849), Marshal of France and Governor-General of Algeria, wanted to create in Algeria military groupings of natives without individual property. He founded villages with such 'frontier regiments' that then were handed over to civilian French cultivators. These new centres of European settlement were meant to be more effective than those, where official colonization had been practised before (Emerit, 1959; Blanc, 1951).

These racist views of the colonial masters were consolidated and complemented by the 'epidermalization of inferiority', a concept coined by Frantz Fanon, which has been later on transferred in postcolonial studies to the social concept of 'mimicry' (Radak, 2015). It refers to emotions, behaviour and discourses that enabled the colonizers to approach the colonized. Accordingly, the 'colonial' administration of the Balkans revealed links between Africa and the Balkans. People in both regions exhibited polyphonic cultures and multiple identities, based on manifestations of deep alienation, resulting in an inability to accept the hybrid heritage as their own. The Balkans had been thought of as representing a kind of an 'inner Africa', i.e. connotations attributed to the African continent since its colonisation which remained dominant until today (Radak, 2015). In the African liberation movements and the newly independent African states (Neuberger, 1976), as well as in the Balkans between 1991 and 2015, the discursive link was similar biased. The terms 'Balkans' and 'Balkanisation' became derogatory terms, often used as strong racial stereotypes such as primitivism. Elements of this self-representation may be present subliminally in Balkan and African societies till today (Radak, 2015). They could effectively constrain Croat – African relations concerning an exchange between equals on a level playing field (Kohnert, 2022).

Thereby it is crucial to keep in mind that major characteristics of conflicts in both Africa and the Balkans are based on ethnicity and religion. Both became so enmeshed that they hardly could be separated. Moreover, religion and occult beliefs play a vital role in the social life of many people in Africa and the Balkans. These constitute key elements of people's identity

⁴ « Je vis un peuple guerrier, courageux, rude et ignorant, enfant de la nature; qui nourrit d'aliments simples et grossiers, et croissant sans culture comme le chêne des forêts, parvenait aux tailles élevées des premières races humaines; bon et sauvage ... » (“I saw a warlike people, courageous, rough and ignorant, children of nature; which fed on simple and coarse food, and growing without culture like the oak of the forests, reached the heights of the first human races; good and wild.”, translation, the author)

(Abu-Nimer & Kadayifci-Orellana, 2008; Kohnert, 2020). Notwithstanding that the main reasons for conflicts in these regions were not religious, religious traditions and legends have frequently been misused in stereotyping and dehumanizing the ‘other’ and the ‘stranger’ (Abu-Nimer & Kadayifci-Orellana, 2008; Kohnert, 2009). Thus, former Yugoslavia showed that Europe was and remains not immune to the ‘ethnic’ upheavals that had long been attributed almost exclusively to Africa (Almeida-Topor, 1996).

Thereby the example of a comparison of former Yugoslavia with Somalia shows interesting parallels between the political crisis of the nation-state in Sub-Saharan Africa and the European Western Balkans. In both cases, nationalist politics were fuelled by the harnessing of ethnicity and the disqualification of political societies with questionable sovereignty. The authoritarian mode of regulation of society was at the root of ethnopolitical conflicts in Somalia and Yugoslavia (Sindjoun, 1994).

Interestingly, a ‘territorial dialectic’ showed close similarities between the African space and the Western Balkans. The Yugoslavian wars of 1997 and 1999 showed that the Serbs, for whom the integrity of their country had never been put into question, were deeply divided from the Kosovars, for whom the Federation, associated with colonial aims, had no longer any meaning (Westphal, 2011).

Cartoon 3: ‘Bwana, as soon as we saw you on TV and heard your statement about Africa, we knew you were the right man for us’.

Source: Nik Titanik, 31 August 2018 © (all rights reserved).
Zagreb Express - 24sata, www.niktitanikstudio.com⁵

Nonetheless, Yugoslavia had been involved in the Non-Aligned Movement during the Cold War when it supported the African independence movements and many independent countries in West Africa, Central and Southern Africa. The goal was the ‘socialist modernization’ of the so-called ‘Third World’ (Triebel, 2018). At the UN, Belgrade campaigned for the criminalization of apartheid and racism within the framework of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (adopted in 1965, entered into force in 1969) and the Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid (1973 and 1976) (Pountounigni Njuh, 2019).

⁵ Cartoon in allusion to an Africa statement of Croatian Premier, Zoran Milanović, at the Fourth EU-Africa Summit in Brussels on 2 April 2014, including remarks to stem the “Illegal migrant flows between both continents” – Cartoonist: Emir Imamović Pirke, ‘Najviše cenzure ima tamo gdje se svi prave da je nema’, (The most censorship is where everyone pretends it doesn’t exist), 31 August 2018.

Last, but not least, the Western Balkans have been the origin of migration as well as a transit route to Western Europe for African migrants for centuries. The recent European migration crisis of 2015–16 brought the Balkans, notably Serbia and Croatia, again into the spotlight, because thousands of migrants used the Balkan migration route on their way to Western Europe (Cocco, 2017). The weak and often contradictory responses of EU countries to the crisis hurt Croatia's perception of the EU which had previously been positive. An estimated one million migrants and refugees passed through this route by either registering at the Preševo centre in Serbia or by bypassing it and moving on. About 80 % of them found shelter in Germany (Cocco, 2017).

The top SSA countries of origin of African migrants into the EU in 2015 were Eritrea (6th rank), Nigeria (10th rank), Somalia (11th rank) and Gambia (15th rank) (see Graph 2)

Graph 2: Influx of migrants into the EU (including Croatia) during the European refugee crisis, 2015⁶

Source: 2015 European migrant crisis, wikipedia

Thereby, the Western Balkans had been particularly affected by the illegal practices of human trafficking because the local population had experienced mass displacement, ethnic cleansing and state-promoted violence against civilians during the Yugoslav wars from 1991 to 2001 (Cocco, 2017). The migration crisis impacted cooperation between the Balkan states, including a resurgence of nationalist rhetoric of ethnic purity. Moreover, it reinforced

⁶ Asylum applicants in Europe between 1 January and 30 June 2015. Graphic by Maximilian Dörrbecker (Chumwa), Eurostat dataset. European Migration Crisis, 2015, Wikipedia

Eurocepticism and worsened foreign relations of the Western Balkan countries with the EU institutions and individual EU member states, notably Germany, because of their self-interested management of the crisis (Cocco, 2017).

On the other hand, the EU turned a blind eye to Croatian handling of the most recent migrant crisis in 2019, when the wasteland outside the Bosnian city of Bihac became a dumping ground for up to 7,000 single male migrants. Thus, the hamlet of Vučjak, a former dump, ringed by land mines from the Yugoslav wars, became an infamous repulsive symbol for Europe's largely suppressed migrant crisis. Croatian border policy was accused of systematic push-backs of migrants by Amnesty International, the Council of Europe, Human Rights Watch, and a United Nations special rapporteur (Connelly, 2019). Yet, the EU allegedly not only facilitated this break of basic human rights but rewarded brute force by Croatia in the name of protecting its longest land border. At least, the European Commission announced in December 2018 that it awarded € 6.8 m to Zagreb to strengthen border surveillance and law enforcement capacity (Connelly, 2019).

Cartoon 4: Increase in the influx of irregular migrants in Croatia ⁷

Source: VL Večernji list, 11 December 2020
Cartoon: 'Felix', Srećko Puntarić, © (all rights reserved).

⁷ Cartoon by the Croatian cartoonist 'Felix', pen name of Srećko Puntarić, on irregular migration in Croatia, published by Večernji list, one of the leading Croatian daily newspapers published in Zagreb. Legend: "Despite the coronavirus... 16 illegal migrants passed through our forest... which is even 80% of last year's results!" – "A caricature that infuriated the president, and also replaced the editors." Ježovita, Mateja (2020): Karikatura koja je izazivala bijes u predsjednika, a smjenjivala je i urednike. Večernji list, VL, www.vecernji.hr

3. Croatia's foreign trade relations with SSA

As shown above, Croatia has a long tradition of economic cooperation with SSA. Croatia's predecessor state, Yugoslavia, cooperated with African nonaligned countries in the period between 1973 and 1981, thereby relying mostly on mutual economic cooperation (Pustaj, 2016). A model example had been the industrial cooperation with Ghana and two Yugoslav-Ghanaian joint ventures, established in 1971. The first joint venture included ŠIK from Kruševac, cooperating with Ghana in forest exploitation and wood processing (TTK-LTD), the other, Tomos from Koper, cooperated in the form of a joint factory for the production of motorcycles and pumps (TOMOS-GHANA LTD) (Pustaj, 2016).

With Croatia entering the European Union (EU), Croatian trade agreements with the South Eastern European countries no longer apply due to its simultaneous exit from the Central European Free Trade Agreement (CEFTA), originally founded by the Visegrád Group countries in 1992, to which Croatia adhered to since 2003 (Štulec & Bakovic & Vučković, 2014). The process of adaptation led to profound changes in Croatian foreign trade.

Graph 4: Croatian foreign trade, 2007 - 2013
(in % of total trade by trade partners)

Source: Štulec & Bakovic & Vučković, 2014
Croatian Bureau of Statistics (2009, 2011, 2013, 2014)

Following the EU, Croatia chose a gradual process of accession to the EU in four stages of trade liberalization: (1) membership in the World Trade Organization (WTO), (2) the Stabilization and Association Agreement (SAA) with the EU, (3) negotiation process on EU membership and (4) the full membership in the EU (Štulec & Bakovic & Vučković, 2014).

This process was initiated after the country's independence with the choice of the exchange rate regime and the introduction of its own currency, the Croatian kuna on 30 May 1994. The country became the 140th member of the WTO on 30 November 2000 and therewith abolished non-tariff protectionist measures. Its subsequent accession to the European Free Trade Agreement (EFTA) in 2001, the Central European Free Trade Agreement (CEFTA) and the Free Trade Agreement with Turkey in 2002 further enhanced trade liberalization (Štulec & Bakovic & Vučković, 2014).

The trade diversion resulted in an increase in exports to and imports from the EU, and a decline in exports to CEFTA countries. After joining the WTO in 2000, Croatia continued to depend heavily on foreign trade, which amounts to 90.6 % of the GDP in 2020 (Stanbic bank, 2022). The EU accounted for 69.7 % of Croatian exports (mainly toward Germany, Italy, and Slovenia), followed by Bosnia and Herzegovina (8.6%) and Hungary (7.2%). The leading origins of imports were the EU (81.2 %), China (4.6 %), and Bosnia and Herzegovina (2.9 %). Actually, Croatia had a structural trade deficit: the exports of goods totalled US$ 17.1 bn while imports decreased by 5.1 %, to US$ 26.7 bn. But the country was a net exporter of services (exports US$ 9.7 bn, imports US$ 3.9 bn) (Stanbic bank, 2022).

Graph 5: Croatia’s share in world merchandise exports, top trading partners ⁸

Source: WTO, trade maps, Croatia, 2022

Graph 6: Croatia’s merchandise exports by product group, p.a., 2019 (US$ m)

See data.wto.org for more data

Source: WTO, trade maps, Croatia, 2022

⁸ Merchandise exports, f.o.b., US$ m. The numbers indicate: (1) EU, (2) Bosnia and Herzegovina, (3) Serbia, (4) USA, (5) United Kingdom.

Croatia's overall trade deficit increased substantially to an estimated 6.7 % of GDP in 2020. This was considerably higher than the level of 0.3% recorded one year earlier, mostly due to a sharp contraction in services' exports at -43.4 % (Stanbic bank, 2022), probably in connection with the impact of restrictions caused by the COVID-19 pandemic.

A comparative analysis of foreign trade in the transitional period of Croatia and South Africa revealed an infamous common history of organized crime (TOC) and the illicit arms trade, and the consolidation of democracy (Tukic, 2011). The process was characterized by high levels of corruption within the judicial system and police, and a lack of trust of citizens in the state's capacity to impose social control. This opened the way for organized criminal groups to work with impunity. Confronted with high levels of inequality and unemployment many people had to look for alternative survival strategies. The fatal development had been reinforced by a lack of resources and corruption among customs officials and police staff. This, in turn, allowed for organized crime to traffic illicit goods over the borders, revealing severe deficits in the state's law enforcement capacity. This on the other hand stimulated the development of mafia-like criminal patron-client relationships that replaced the legitimacy of crucial institutions of the state (Tukic, 2011).

Graph 7: Croatia's foreign trade, 2016-2020

Foreign Trade Values	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020
Imports of Goods (million USD)	21,688	24,829	28,203	28,160	26,719
Exports of Goods (million USD)	13,736	16,069	17,402	17,180	17,167
Imports of Services (million USD)	3,906	4,574	5,430	5,573	3,932
Exports of Services (million USD)	13,490	15,054	16,354	17,162	9,714

Source: World Trade Organisation (WTO) : Latest available data

Foreign Trade Indicators	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020
Foreign Trade (in % of GDP)	94.1	99.1	101.2	104.2	90.6
Trade Balance (million USD)	-8,437	-9,517	-11,406	-11,525	-9,779
Trade Balance (Including Service) (million USD)	671	595	-613	-317	-3,938
Imports of Goods and Services (Annual % Change)	6.5	8.4	7.5	6.3	-13.8
Exports of Goods and Services (Annual % Change)	7.0	6.8	3.7	6.8	-25.0
Imports of Goods and Services (in % of GDP)	46.5	49.3	51.0	52.2	48.9
Exports of Goods and Services (in % of GDP)	47.6	49.9	50.2	52.0	41.7

Source: World Bank : Latest available data

Source: Croatia: Economic and Political Overview.
Johannesburg, Stanbic bank (Standard Bank), July 2022

Moreover, post-war non-urban Croatia was haunted by its past, characterized by backwardness, decay, and political instability notably in its rural periphery (Hauthal, 2021). The country's experience with civil war and accompanying atrocities demonstrated that this 'backwardness' was not only characteristic - according to a common prejudice - for African

developing countries, but it could happen also in Europe. Thus, in a provocative sense, one could maintain that Croatian history showed all signs of an 'Africanization' (Hauthal, 2021).

Multi-ethnic societies like Croatia and African states like South Africa, Nigeria, Ghana and DR Congo are particularly prone to political upheaval in the course of regime change when dominant ethnic groups decide how to accommodate minorities (Hislope, 1998). Thereby, a liberal approach to dealing with ethnic minorities would in principle be the best way to ensure a peaceful transition, by getting the democratic consent of minorities, and securing political legitimacy. In the history of post-Apartheid South Africa, this apparently was the case, whereas in Croatia this was only of limited effectiveness (Hislope, 1998).

Since 2018, Croatia tried to re-orientate its foreign trade activities within the scope of the Chinese Belt and Road initiative. Zagreb wanted to achieve stronger relations with Asia, Europe and Africa. Beijing's '17+1' initiative, i.e. the cooperation between China and Central and Eastern European countries, focused on strengthening the relations between China and the seventeen countries of Europe's East and Southeast. In fact, Croatia was one of the 17 countries strategically selected by China. Because of its geographical position, the long coast with several natural harbours, the proximity to large EU economies, as well as a relatively good infrastructure within the country attracted Beijing's interest. Zagreb, on the other hand, not only endeavoured to participate more actively in the '17+1' cooperation framework but even jumped at the chance and suggested hosting the latest '17+1' summit, held in April 2019 (Stopić, 2020). In how far the shifting global trade flows, away from the Atlantic region towards the countries bordering the Pacific, attracted by the most important future global markets in the Pacific region and represented by the Comprehensive and Progressive Trans-Pacific Partnership (CPTPP), a grouping of eleven Asian countries bordering the Pacific, will negatively impact on Croatia's Africa trade, remains to be seen.

4. Conclusion

Croatia will become the twentieth member of the eurozone at the turn of the year despite its relatively high debt ratio. Thus, the eurozone is thus growing for the first time since 2015, when Lithuania had been admitted. Measured in terms of economic output, the Balkan country will take 14th place in the Euro currency union (Volkery, 2022).

Graph 8: 'The most successful design for the 'Kuna' motif'

Source: Volkery, 2022

Whether the country can and will fulfil its longstanding obligations vis à vis its African partner countries in face of the demanding duties and responsibilities associated with its joining the eurozone is an open question. This, all the more, because new, more lucrative hunting grounds for Croatian foreign trade are tempting in the Pacific region.

Sub-Saharan African (SSA) states, on the other hand, dispose of less fiscal space to mitigate the impact on their residents, more than ever before. Africans were already impaired previously because they had to suffer, more than others, from climate change, including prolonged droughts, and political destabilization, particularly in the Sahel, the Horn of Africa and East Africa. Most African countries are heavily dependent on the import of energy and foodstuff, notably wheat from Russia and Ukraine. Moreover, the two major African powers, Nigeria and South Africa are currently going through major socio-economic crises (Borrell, 2022). The soaring food and energy prices will increase worldwide food insecurity and may even trigger social unrest (Gourinchas, 2022).

The growing divide between rich and poor countries has been supplemented by discrepancies within countries. The COVID-19 pandemic has already had a particularly harsh impact on the African poor in the recent past (Kohnert, 2021b). At least 30 million Africans were thrown into extreme poverty. Thereby, the crisis further worsened the inequality not just between income groups, but also across subnational geographic regions. This could further add to the risk of social tension and political instability (Selassie, 2021).

In a populist Croatian view, Croatia's foreign relations with Ghana, for example, may focus rather on soccer than on trade, regarding the activities of four Ghanaian expatriates playing for Croatia ⁹. Croatia's Sub-Saharan Africa trade is an 'also-ran', it ranked in the 32nd position (behind Lithuania), with US$ 66,355 m exports and US$ 118,843 m imports in 2019 (WITS, Worldbank, August 2022).

Graph 9: Croatia's Major trading partners (exports and imports, 2019)

Source: WITS, 2022

In relative terms, that is, only concerning sub-Saharan Africa, bilateral trade relations, e.g. with Ghana, developed positively. Ghanaian exports to Croatia (mostly wood, fish, cocoa) rose steadily in the last decade to US$ 1.31 m in 2019.

Graph 10: Increase of Ghanaian exports to Croatia, 2011 to 2020

⁹ Ghanaian expatriate sportspeople in Croatia, wikipedia

Source: Trading economics, 2022

In a nutshell, stiff headwinds in the global economy militate against small emerging economies like Croatia, ranging from protectionism to exchange rate tensions, financial volatility, and challenges to the digitalisation of production. To overcome these constraints, Zagreb would be well advised to improve investment in infrastructures. There is still considerable scope for reducing the anti-competitive impact of state control of the economy by reducing para-fiscal charges and non-tariff barriers to trade as well as deficits in the judicial system (Devlić & Medcraft (2019)).

Appendix

Appendix 1: Croatia's bilateral relations with 35 Sub-Saharan African states

Country	Formal relations began	Notes
 Angola	16 November 1994	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Angola through its embassy in Lisbon (Portugal).^[13] Angola is represented in Croatia through its embassy in Vienna (Austria).^[14]
 Benin	26 March 2001	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Benin through its embassy in Paris (France).^[15] Benin is represented in Croatia through its embassy in Geneva (Switzerland).^[16]
 Botswana	9 September 2005	Diplomatic relations between Botswana and Croatia were established on 9 September 2005. ^{[17][18]}
 Burkina Faso	18 May 1995	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Burkina Faso through its embassy in Paris (France). Burkina Faso is represented in Croatia through its embassy in Vienna (Austria) and consulate in Zagreb.^[19]
 Cape Verde	13 August 1994	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Cape Verde through its embassy in Lisbon (Portugal). Cape Verde is not represented in Croatia.
 Central African Republic	N/A	Croatia does not maintain diplomatic relations with the C.A.R.
 Chad	17 September 1999	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Chad through its embassy in Paris (France). Chad is not represented in Croatia.
 Comoros	29 June 1999	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Comoros through its embassy in Pretoria (South Africa). Comoros is not represented in Croatia.
 Côte d'Ivoire	17 October 1995	Both countries established diplomatic relations on 25 May 2017. ^{[20][21]}
 Djibouti	25 May 2017
 Eritrea	4 June 1999	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Eritrea through its embassy in Cairo (Egypt). Eritrea is not represented in Croatia.
 Ethiopia	17 October 1995	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Ethiopia through its embassy in Cairo (Egypt). Ethiopia is not represented in Croatia.
 Gabon	22 October 2001	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Gabon through its embassy in Rabat (Morocco). Gabon is not represented in Croatia.
 Gambia	16 October 1998	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Gambia through its embassy in London (UK). Gambia is represented in Croatia through its embassy in London (UK).
 Ghana	17 February 1993	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Ghana through its embassy in London (UK). Ghana is represented in Croatia through its embassy in Rome (Italy).
 Guinea-Bissau	19 October 1995	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Guinea-Bissau through its embassy in Lisbon (Portugal). Guinea-Bissau is not represented in Croatia.
 Kenya	22 May 1992	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Kenya through its embassy in Pretoria (South Africa).^[22] Kenya has a consulate in Zagreb, accredited to its embassy in Rome (Italy).^[23]
 Lesotho	6 November 1998	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Lesotho through its embassy in Pretoria (South Africa). Lesotho is represented in Croatia through its embassy in Rome (Italy).
 Liberia	N/A	Croatia does not maintain diplomatic relations with Liberia.
 Madagascar	27 September 2006	Both countries established diplomatic relations on 27 September 2006. ^{[24][25]}
 Malawi	13 October 1998	Both countries established diplomatic relations on 13 November 1998. ^{[24][26]}

Country	Formal relations began	Notes
 Mali	20 September 1995	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Mali through its embassy in Rabat (Morocco). Mali is represented in Croatia through its embassy in Rome (Italy).
 Mauritania	11 November 2004	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Mauritania through its embassy in Rabat (Morocco). <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Mauritania is not represented in Croatia.
 Mauritius	3 September 1997	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Mauritius through its embassy in Pretoria (South Africa). <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Mauritius is not represented in Croatia.
 Mozambique	23 August 1996	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Mozambique through its embassy in Pretoria (South Africa). <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Mozambique is not represented in Croatia.
 Niger	N/A	Croatia does not maintain diplomatic relations with Niger.
 Nigeria	7 January 1993	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Nigeria through its embassy in London (UK). Nigeria is represented in Croatia through its embassy in Budapest (Hungary).
 São Tomé and Príncipe	23 May 1993	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in São Tomé and Príncipe through its embassy in Lisbon (Portugal). <ul style="list-style-type: none"> São Tomé and Príncipe is not represented in Croatia.
 Senegal	1 October 1997	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Senegal through its embassy in Rabat (Morocco). <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Senegal is not represented in Croatia.
 Seychelles	30 September 1997	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Seychelles through its embassy in Pretoria (South Africa). <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Seychelles is not represented in Croatia.
 South Africa	19 November 1992	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia has an embassy in Pretoria.^[27] South Africa is represented in Croatia through its embassy in Budapest (Hungary), and consulate in Zagreb. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> There are around 1500 to 2000 Croats who live in South Africa.^[28] <ul style="list-style-type: none"> As of 2006, the two countries have a trade agreement.^[29] South African Department of Foreign Affairs about relations with Croatia
 Sudan	17 July 1992	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Sudan through its embassy in Cairo (Egypt). Sudan is represented in Croatia through its embassy in Rome (Italy).
 Tanzania	2 July 1993	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Tanzania through its embassy in Pretoria (South Africa).^[30] Tanzania is represented in Croatia through its embassy in Rome (Italy).^[31]
 Togo	20 December 1993	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Togo through its embassy in Paris (France). <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Togo is not represented in Croatia.
 Uganda	10 March 1999	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Uganda through its embassy in Pretoria (South Africa). <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Uganda is not represented in Croatia.
 Zambia	20 September 1995	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Croatia is represented in Zambia through its embassy in Pretoria (South Africa). Zambia is represented in Croatia through its embassy in Paris (France).
 Zimbabwe	12 February 1999	Both countries established diplomatic relations on February 12, 1999.^{[20][32]} Source: Foreign relations of Croatia, Wikipedia, July 2022

Source: Foreign relations of Croatia, Wikipedia, July 2022

References

- Abu-Nimer, Mohammed & S. Ayse Kadayifci-Orellana (2008) : Muslim peace-building actors in Africa and the Balkan context: Challenges and needs. Peace & Change, vol. 33 (4), pp. 549-581
- Almeida-Topor, Hélène. de (1996) : Naissance des États africains. Castermann & Giunti Gruppo Editoriale, Firenze, p. 127
- Blanc, A. (1951) : Les confins militaires croates au XIX e siècle Revue des études slaves, vol. 28 (1-4), pp. 111-128
- Blazsetin, Vjekoslav (2019): Slika Tita u popularnoj kulturi između 1948. i 1953. [The image of Tito in popular culture between 1948 and 1953: Comparative analysis; in Croatian language]. Thesis, Faculty of Philosophy in ZagrebZagreb, Department of Croatian Studies, July 9, 2019.
- Borrell, Josep (2022): Russia's invasion of Ukraine puts the global economy at risk. EEAS, 16 May 2022
- Cocco, E. (2017): Where is the European frontier? The Balkan migration crisis and its impact on relations between the EU and the Western Balkans. European View, vol.16, pp. 293–302
- Connelly, Andrew (2019): Croatia is abusing migrants while the EU turns a blind eye. Washington D.C.: Foreign Policy, 6 December 2019
- Devlić, Jasmin & Greg Medcraft (2019): Croatia's competitiveness: Challenges and opportunities. OECD Investment Policy Reviews: Croatia 2019, Chapter 3.
- Emerit, Marcel (1959): L'influence russe et croate sur la colonisation militaire à l'époque de Bugeaud. Outre-Mers. Revue d'histoire, 1959, No. 163-165, pp. 85-96
- EP-news (2022): MEPs approve Croatia's entry into the Eurozone. Press Releases, Plenary session, 5 July 2022
- Freedom House (2022): Croatia is rated Free in Freedom in the World 2022. Washington D.C.: Freedom House.
- Gourinchas, Pierre-Olivier (2022): Global economic growth slows amid gloomy and more uncertain outlook. IMF-blog, 26 July 2022
- Hauthal, Janine (2021): Imagining the European periphery: Post-war Croatia in Aminatta Forna's The Hired Man . Journal of Postcolonial Writing, vol. 57 (3), pp. 302-315
- Hina (2020): Croatia to establish diplomatic relations with five more countries. Croatia Week, Zagreb: 'Hina', Croatian News Agency, 29 October 2020
- Hislope, Robert (1998): The generosity moment: Ethnic politics, democratic consolidation and the state in Yugoslavia \(Croatia\), South Africa and Czechoslovakia. Democratization, vol. 5 (1), pp. 64-89
- Kohnert, Dirk (2022): French domination of markets in Francophone Africa: Post-colonialism at its finest? MPRA_paper_112024
- Kohnert, Dirk (2021 c): The EU-Africa summit 2021 : Quo vadis, in the light of Brexit and Corona. ResearchGate, MPRA WP 106283
- Kohnert, Dirk (2020): On the impact of the occult on state legitimacy and democratization aid in Africa. Author's English version of : Kohnert, Dirk (1997): [Zum Einfluß des Okkulten auf staatliche Legitimität und Demokratisierungshilfe in Afrika, Sociologus, 47.1997.1: 24-50]
- Kohnert, Dirk (2009): New nationalism and development in Africa - review article. Africa Spectrum, vol. 44 (2009) 1: 111-123

- Majetić, Vanja (2018): Odjeci summita EU-Afrika: Koje su hrvatske šanse za posao na Crnom kontinentu? Analitičar tvrdi da Plenković može više nego Milanović (Echoes of the EU-Africa summit: What are Croatia's chances for a job on the Black Continent? The analyst claims that Plenković can do more than Milanović). portal.hr, 22 December 2018
- Mansi, E. & E. Hysa & M. Panait & M.C. Voica (2020) : Poverty - A challenge for economic development? Evidences from Western Balkan countries and the European Union. Sustainability, 2020, 12, 7754, pp. 1-24
- Matić, Dalibor (2017): Odnosi EUa i AKP-a nakon sporazuma iz Cotonoua: Hrvatski pogled na ulogu novih država članica u odnosu EU-a i AKP-a nakon 2020. \(EU and AKP relations after the Cotonou agreement - Croatian view of the role of the new member states in the relationship between the EU and the AKP after 2020; in Croatian\). Europske studije, vol. 3 (5-6), 2017
- Neuberger, Benyamin (1976): The African concept of Balkanisation. Journal of Modern African Studies, vol. 14 (3), pp. 523 – 529
- Pountougnigni Njuh, Ludovic Boris (2019): Moscou, Belgrade et l’anticolonialisme: dynamiques historiques d’une aide extérieure à l’émancipation de l’Afrique \(dé\)colonisée \(1920-1990\). Diacronie – Studi di Storia Contemporanea, vol. 37 (1), pp. 1-19
- Pustaj, M. (2016): Ekonomski odnosi SFRJ i nesvrstanih zemalja Afrike 1973-1981 (Economic relations between Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and African Nonaligned countries 1973-1981. Diploma Thesis. Filozofski fakultet u Zagrebu, Department of History. In Croatian)
- Radak, Sanja Lazarević (2015): A journey through ‘European Africa’: Frantz Fanon and the discourse on the Balkan. Subalternspeak - An International Journal of Postcolonial Studies, vol. 3 (4), pp. 1-15
- Smitek, Z. & A.S. Lazarevic & D. Petrovic (1993): Notes sur les voyageurs et explorateurs Slovènes, croates et serbes en Afrique avant 1918 et sur leurs collections \(Présentation de René Pélissier\). Outre-Mers. Revue d'histoire, 1993 (300), pp. 389-408
- Spasojević, Boban (2018): Plenković Wants Croatia-Africa Economic Relations to Improve. Diplomacy & Commerce, December 18, 2018
- Stanbic bank(2022): Croatia: Economic and political overview foreign trade in figures, Stanbic bank, Standard Bank, July 2022
- Stopić, Z. (2020): Croatia and the Chinese “17+ 1” cooperation framework. Croatian International Relations Review, XXVI (86) 2020, pp. 130-154
- Triebel, Brigitta (2018): Nation, Sozialismus und globaler Kalter Krieg: die slowakische und kroatische Kulturpolitik in Afrika und Asien in den 1970er-Jahren. In: Forschungen zur Geschichte und Kultur des östlichen Mitteleuropa, vol. 57. University of Leipzig: thesis, Dresden: Sandstein Kommunikation, p. 260
- Tukic, N. (2011): The illicit arms trade in states in transition: a comparative study of South Africa and Croatia. Thesis (MA)--Stellenbosch University, 2011
- Volkery, Carsten (2022): Alle Kriterien erfüllt: Kroatien kann 2023 den Euro einführen. Handelsblatt, 1 June 2022
- Westphal, Bertrand (2011) : Quelques considérations pour une géocritique de l’espace africain. In : Albert, Christine et al (2011) : Littératures africaines et territoires (2011), Karthala, pp. 45 – 55

Résumé : En juillet 2020, le Parlement européen a voté en faveur de la candidature de la Croatie pour devenir le plus récent membre de la zone euro à partir du 1er janvier 2023. Malgré le revers de la pandémie de COVID-19, il a rempli tous les critères d'adoption de l'euro, compte tenu de la forte inflation et de l'impact de l'invasion russe de l'Ukraine. L'entrée de la Croatie dans la zone euro sera la première étape significative positive dans le processus d'intégration européenne depuis le Brexit. Il peut montrer des perspectives pour un nouvel élargissement de la zone euro dans les Balkans. L'adhésion affectera également les relations de l'UE avec l'Afrique. En plus de liens étrangers étroits avec l'Afrique du Sud, Zagreb a établi des relations diplomatiques avec le Soudan du Sud, la Somalie et la République Centrafricaine en 2020. Cependant, étant donné la relation de longue date entre la Croatie et l'Afrique, il est crucial de tenir compte des leçons tirées de ses relations africaines à multiples facettes. Pour la plupart inconnus en dehors de leur pays d'origine, les explorateurs croates comme Dragutin Lerman ont activement exploré l'Afrique subsaharienne au début du XXe siècle. Pendant la guerre froide, les relations politiques et économiques entre la Yougoslavie (y compris la Croatie) et les pays africains non-alignés se sont considérablement améliorées entre 1973 et 1981. La coopération économique mutuelle entre les pays non-alignés a été encouragée pour lutter contre le « sous-développement » en Afrique. En 1971, par exemple, des joint-ventures yougoslaves-ghanéennes ont été créées dans le cadre de la coopération industrielle, par exemple pour l'exploitation forestière et la transformation du bois ainsi que pour une usine commune de motos et de pompes au Ghana. En outre, la Yougoslavie était le seul pays non-africain à aider à financer le Comité de libération de l'Organisation de l'unité africaine (OUA), bien que Zagreb ait favorisé les liens bilatéraux avec les mouvements de libération individuels. Cependant, la Croatie et l'Afrique du Sud ont rencontré des difficultés avec le commerce illicite des armes pendant le processus de transition en raison des niveaux élevés de corruption dans le système judiciaire et la police. Le manque de confiance des citoyens des deux pays dans la capacité de l'État à imposer un contrôle social a également ouvert la voie à l'impunité du crime organisé. Les groupes criminels ont utilisé des relations patron-client avec les citoyens d'Afrique du Sud et de Croatie pour établir et maintenir un niveau de légitimité populaire qui manquait à l'État.

Zusammenfassung: Im Juli 2020 stimmte das EU-Parlament für den Antrag Kroatiens, ab dem 1. Januar 2023 das neueste Mitglied der Eurozone zu werden. Trotz des Rückschlags durch die COVID-19-Pandemie erfüllte es alle Kriterien für die Einführung des Euro, unter Berücksichtigung der hohen Inflation und der Auswirkungen der russischen Invasion in der Ukraine. Der Beitritt Kroatiens zum Euro wird der erste bedeutende positive Schritt im europäischen Integrationsprozess seit dem Brexit sein. Er kann Perspektiven für eine weitere Erweiterung der Eurozone auf dem Balkan aufzeigen. Der Beitritt wird sich auch auf die Beziehungen der EU zu Afrika auswirken. Neben den engen Auslandsbeziehungen zu Südafrika hat Zagreb im Jahr 2020 diplomatische Beziehungen zum Südsudan, Somalia und der Zentralafrikanischen Republik aufgenommen. Im Hinblick auf die langjährigen Beziehungen Kroatiens zu Afrika ist es jedoch entscheidend, die daraus gezogenen Lehren der facettenreichen afrikanischen Beziehungen zu berücksichtigen. Kroatische Entdecker wie Dragutin Lerman, die außerhalb ihres Heimatlandes größtenteils unbekannt sind, waren im frühen 20. Jahrhundert aktiv bei der Erforschung der afrikanischen Länder südlich der Sahara. Während des Kalten Krieges verbesserten sich die politischen und wirtschaftlichen Beziehungen zwischen Jugoslawien (einschließlich Kroatien) und den afrikanischen blockfreien Ländern zwischen 1973 und 1981 erheblich. Gegenseitige wirtschaftliche Zusammenarbeit zwischen blockfreien Ländern wurde gefördert, um die „Unterentwicklung“ in Afrika zu bekämpfen. So wurden 1971 im Rahmen der Industriekooperation jugoslawisch-ghanaische Joint Ventures gegründet, beispielsweise zur Waldnutzung und Holzverarbeitung sowie für eine gemeinsame Fabrik für Motorräder und Pumpen in Ghana. Darüber hinaus war Jugoslawien das einzige nichtafrikanische Land, das zur Finanzierung des Befreiungskomitees der Organisation für Afrikanische Einheit (OAU) beitrug, obwohl Zagreb bilaterale Beziehungen zu einzelnen Befreiungsbewegungen bevorzugte. Allerdings hatten sowohl Kroatien als auch Südafrika während des Übergangsprozesses Schwierigkeiten mit dem illegalen Waffenhandel aufgrund der hohen Korruption im Justizsystem und bei der Polizei. Auch das mangelnde Vertrauen der Bürger beider Länder in die Fähigkeit des Staates, soziale Kontrolle durchzusetzen, öffnete der organisierten Kriminalität den Weg, ungestraft zu arbeiten. Kriminelle Gruppen nutzten Patron-Client-Beziehungen mit den Bürgern Südafrikas und Kroatiens, um ein Maß an Legitimität in der Bevölkerung aufzubauen und aufrechtzuerhalten, das dem Staat fehlte.